What is Semester Long Projects (SLoP)?

Semester Long Projects or SLoP is an initiative by Developer Student Club, DA-IICT, open for students of any university in India who are new to open source software development to get started with open source contributions.
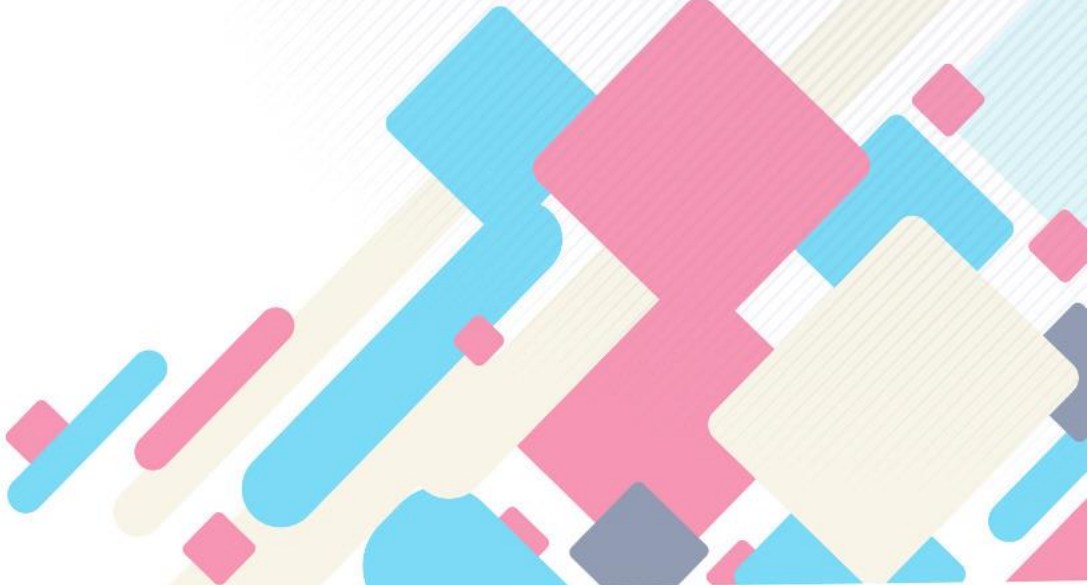

It's modeled to be similar but smaller Google Summer of Code (GSoC), which is a global program that matches students up with open source, free software and technology-related organizations to write code and get paid for the same. Similarly, SLoP is aimed at introducing new students in the area and helps them gain confidence.

All the work is going to be on GitHub, which is used for source code hosting and collaborative software development. We have exciting cash prizes and goodies for you too!

Goals of the program :

• Inspire young developers to get involved in Open Source software development.

• Provide real life development projects to students to give them opportunity to learn more about current tools and technologies.

• Provide a great opportunity to get acquainted with Git - Github like tools.

• Start a healthy development culture in college.

• Connect with experienced mentors, and be in contact with them even after the program ends.

• Prepare students for other Open Source programs like Google Summer of Code and Outreachy. Help students about how to select a project, interact with mentors and learn all other things to make their first pull request.
